ProcessPro Client Connect Gets Outstanding Reviews

St. Cloud, Minn., October 5, 2010 -- ProcessPro, developers of ProcessPro® Premier ERP, recently hosted its seventh annual user conference. Clients from across the US representing five major manufacturing industries attended this year's Client Connect.

"This year's conference sessions offered the most comprehensive and widest range of classes to date," says Rebecca Kempenich, ProcessPro Marketing Manager and Conference Coordinator. "With four business track options, classes this year were more in-depth and advanced, including hands-on and workshop style sessions."

The classes at Client Connect were designed to meet the needs of all employee positions and software mastery levels within clients' organizations.

"Each year we strive to create a conference that provides exceptional value to our clients. Our staff and presentations succeeded this year in not only meeting our clients' expectations, but exceeding them," says Kempenich.

While the conference provided a significant learning opportunity, it also provided motivation and industry networking opportunities.

"It was great to be able to talk with other users that have had situations similar to ours and learn how they solved their problems," states Tim Jenkin of Hampford Research.

Clients were able to discover new system tools, alternative business concepts, and discuss them with others in similar industries.

"The hands-on classes were great. We learned about some very useful tools within the software and can't wait to start using them," says Dave Riley of FoodScience.
